

Virtual Learning Opportunities for Parents and Families

One of the most common myths of parenting a child with gifts and talents is that it must be “easy”. Our kids have big dreams, and at times big feelings. Helping your child manage these big feelings can at times be challenging. Thankfully, there is a wealth of learning opportunities for families to learn how to best support their child. The following are a few offerings to guide you on your path to better understanding of your child’s needs.

NDAGC’s Webinar Archive

Our monthly webinars and access to our webinar archive is a free benefit to our NDAGC members. In our archive, parents will find the following presentations:

Helping your Perfectionist Child Feel Good Enough (February 2020)
with Yee Han Chu

Understanding the Gifted Child: Exploring the Social-Emotional Needs of Gifted Children (broadcast October 2020) with Beth Ustanko and Emily Jones

Providing Coping Support to High School Students in AP Courses: A Review of the ACE Program (December 2020) with Yee Han Chu

Introduction to Bloom’s Taxonomy for Parents & Families (March 2021) with Beth Ustanko and Jolene Beckman

Now They’re Going to Find Out I’m a Fraud: Combatting Imposter Syndrome in the Gifted Brain (August 2021) with Matt Zakreski, PsyD

Renzulli Center for Creativity, Gifted Education, and Talent Development

There is a full archive available of recordings from 2021-2022 presentations. Parents may find the following presentation of particular interest:

Constructive Collaboration with Your Child’s Teacher (broadcast Thurs., October 14, 2021) with Pam Peters - University of Connecticut <https://vimeo.com/626710910>

Gift-a-Palooza 2023: Feb. 2-4, 2023

Gifted & Thriving’s 2nd Annual Virtual Summit on Giftedness & Neurodiversity features keynote speaker Dr. Matt Zakreski. From the event description, “This 3-day event is dedicated to helping individuals and families in the Gifted and Multi-Exceptional community move from a place of surviving to thriving by coming together to share and explore unique experiences, challenges and joys.”